Traffic Fatalities Near Numbers Killed In Warring

Traffic accidents in the single month of July last year killed only 900 fewer Americans than were killed in the Revolutionary war.

That ironic fact underlines the National Safety Council's recent campaign to reduce accidents, especially on the nation's highways, over the Fourth of July--the day which commemorates that victorious struggle for independence.

The Revolutionary war cost 4,044 patriots who were killed in action or who died of wounds. Traffic accidents in July last year killed 3,150 persons, according to the council.

Tragic as war is, the Council said, the number of Americans killed in traffic accidents since the invention of the automobile is nearly twice as great as the number killed in combat in all the nation's wars.

American dead from enemy action in the eight conflicts of our history, including the war in Korea, total about 533,000, the Council said, while traffic accidents have now claimed more than 971,000.

Construction Material Has Own Sprinkler System

Gypsum is widely used in building construction because it is one of the rare materials which possess the insulating qualities necessary to restrain rapid and excessive flow of heat. A rock, which is fashioned into sheathing, lath, plaster, partition tile, roof decks and wallboard, gypsum is not only fireproof, but it possesses a phenomenal characteristic which literally repels fire; it provides its own "sprinkler system." When attacked by fire gypsum releases water to about one-half of its volume. The water released as steam repels the fire and dissipates heat.

The "magic mineral" serves as a fire-protection for wood and steel in building construction. Wood will ignite and burn at temperatures from 350 to 450 degrees, F. While steel will not burn, it begins to lose strength at 850 degrees, F. A two-inch thickness of gypsum plaster protects a steel column for a 4-hour fire-resistive classification; similarly a ⅝-inch thickness of gypsum protects wood studs with a 1-hour fire-resistive rating. Thus, gypsum, protecting structural members of the building until the blaze is brought under control, can minimize direct fire damage and structural collapse.

Base Rate 1.70 on Corn

Virginia farmers can get price support on the 1951 corn crop at a base rate of $1.70 a bushel, the Production and Marketing Administration announced yesterday.

C. D. Jordan, State PMA chairman, said that interim rate will apply until the final official rate is computed on the basis of 90 per cent of parity on October 1, the beginning of the corn marketing year. But in no case will the final rate be less than $1.70 and may be a cent or two higher, he added.

It was explained that the interim rate was announced to enable farmers, especially those in Southeastern Virginia, to get support on early harvested corn.

The base support rate is for corn grading No. 3, or better, or No. 4 solely on the factor of test weight. There are slight premiums for higher grades and disounts for excess moisture and other factors.

PMA, through the Commodity Credit Corporation, offers farmers loans or purchase agreements, the latter being merely an option to sell to CCC whereby the producer retains title to his grain. Corn under loan must either be store in a warehouse approved by CCC or in farm storage bins that meet their requirements for safe storage.

Jordan explained that the price support program promotes orderly marketing of corn. Producers interested in corn price supports can get full information on loans and purchase agreements from their local county office of the Production and Marketing Administration.

Announcement has just been made by the James F. Lincoln Arc Welding Foundation that Leon Paulette, son of Mr. and Mrs. S. R. Paulette, Evergreen, is the winner of fourth prize in the 1950-51 Farm Welding Awards Program of the Foundation. The Lincoln Foundation makes annual awards to farm youths throughout the nation for outstanding accomplishments in the utilization of electric welding in Farm Mechanics. The award to young Paulette carries with it a cash prize of $100.

This recognition was accorded Leon for construction of a power lift for use on any type tractor, a tractor post-hole digger, and a lift-type disc. The announcement was made by A. F. Davis, Secretary of the James F. Lincoln Arc Welding Foundation. In a personal letter to Leon, Mr. Davis said, "In honor of this achievement, the Lincoln Foundation is also presenting the Appomattox High School an equal award of $100. This money is to be spent for the improvement of the Farm Mechanics Course in any way deemed desirable."

Success in the nation-wide Farm Welding Program is the second honor for accomplishment in Farm Mechanics received by Leon this year. Earlier in the year he was awarded a certificate and a check for $100 for the most outstanding record in Farm Mechanics among the more than 8,000 members of the Virginia Association of Future Farmers of America.

Leon, 17, is the first FFA member in Virginia to receive wide recognition for success in Farm Mechanics in his Junior year in high school. Unusual improvements incorporated in two of his home-made farm machines have led to an award of two government patents.

Entries in the Farm Welding Awards Program were judged by a Jury of Award composed of Dr. E. E. Deveese, Chairman of the Dept. of Electrical Engineering at Ohio State University; O. E. Kiser, State Supervisor of Agricultural Education, New Jersey; A. H. Hollenberg, Specialist in Farm Mechanics, U. S. Office of Education, and Ray Morrison, Vo-Ag teacher, Clay Center, Kansas.

Hope to Win Fight on Leaf Allotments

Success in the effort for better acreage quotas for dark-fired tobacco growers of the Old Dominion seems a real possibility. The hope for success are given base by the optimism of Congressman W. M. Abbitt and Senator Harry Byrd, who have spear-headed the effort.

The Senate Agriculture Committee has approved a proposal to authorize yearly acreage adjustments in types of dark-fired tobacco to fit supply and demand.

The House has already approved such a bill.

Representative Abbitt, who has been working on this legislation a long while, said he feels certain the legislation will be enacted into law. He believes that if the bill goes through it will result in Virginia dark-fired quotas being increased next year by at least 10 per cent.

Under the present law, Abbitt said, the types of dark-fired tobacco grown in Tennessee and Kentucky are lumped with the Virginia type in setting quotas.

Under this system, the surpluses which have been occuring for the various types as a whole have worked against the Virginia type which currently is in short supply.
